Her parents, the Winner family, named their daughter Reality. As a young woman in her twenties, she got a job as a freelance contractor for the National Security Administration. One day she ran across a secret document about how, in fact, the Russians were trying to interfere with our elections and help Trump get elected. At that moment — she was not a political person, not an activist, not a “lefty” — she had to decide what to do with this information. A few weeks later the FBI knocked on the door. She thought, “Why are they here? I did nothing wrong. I’m a patriotic American!”

This unique, tense drama, based on a true incident, is taken directly from the tapes the FBI made on the day they visited Reality's home in Savannah, Georgia. Starring the incredible Sydney Sweeney (THE HANDMAID'S TALE), here is, once again, the type of movie you've never seen before — brought to you by your volunteer-run Traverse City Film Festival, a large group of northern Michiganders who just want to see great movies.
